'...a compact TRIUMPH of OUTSTANDING ART SONG'

The Sunday Times

leedslieder.org.uk

LEEDS LIEDER has 'fully realised its potential and become an event of INTERNATIONAL STATURE. It attracts a large, loyal and knowledgeable audience, and not just from the locality'

Opera Now

Ten Festivals and a Pandemic! In 2004 a group of passionate, visionary song enthusiasts began programming recitals in Leeds and this venture has steadily grown to become the jam-packed season we now enjoy. With multiple artistic partners and thousands of individuals attending our events every year, Leeds Lieder is a true cultural success story. 2020 was certainly a year of reacting nimbly and working in new paradigms. We turned Leeds Lieder into its own broadcaster and went digital. It has been extremely rewarding to connect with audiences all over the world throughout the past 12 months, and to support artists both internationally known and just starting out. The support of our Friends and the generosity shown by our audiences has meant that we have been able to continue our award-winning education programmes online, commission new works and provide valuable training for young artists. In 2021 we have invited more musicians than ever before to appear in our Festival and for the first time we look forward to being hosted by Leeds Town Hall. The art of the song recital continues to be relevant and flourish in Yorkshire.

As the finest Festival of art song in the North, we continue to provide a platform for international stars to rub shoulders with the next generation of emerging musicians. However, at the 2021 Festival, we want to place the audience centre stage – we have missed you, and we cannot wait to share music with you once again! Turn to the closing recital and you can read more about your starring role! We enjoyed socially distanced recitals in Leeds Town Hall in the Autumn and feel confident that, Government Guidelines permitting, we can present a Festival you will enjoy in person and feel safe attending. Please see the back inside page for our Covid Safe Information. For those who have enjoyed our Livestreams, you can enjoy every event from the comfort of your home. Information about purchasing livestream tickets can also be found at the back of this brochure.

Our Young Artists will perform across the weekend and work with Dame Felicity Lott, James Gilchrist, Anna Tilbrook, Sir Thomas Allen and Iain Burnside. Iain has also programmed a fascinating music theatre piece for the opening lunchtime recital. New talent is on evidence at every turn in this Festival. Ema Nikolovska and William Thomas return, and young instrumentalists join Mark Padmore for an evening presenting the complete Canticles by Britten. I'm also thrilled to welcome Alice Coote in her Leeds Lieder debut. A recital not to miss. The peerless Graham Johnson appears with one of his Songmakers' Almanac programmes and we welcome back Leeds Lieder favourites Roderick Williams, Carolyn Sampson and James Gilchrist.

Our last season was our most ambitious to date, and we are unashamed in boasting about our growth in audience: a staggering 60% increase in the past four years. Let's keep this upward trajectory! Our exciting Learning and Participation programme which opens up creative music-making to people of all ages, backgrounds and abilities allows many more individuals to take delight in our events. Around 1000 school children will learn songs through our education programmes this year alone.

Ticket sales and public funding provide around half of Leeds Lieder's income and the remainder comes from the most generous philanthropic support, without which the scope of our programming and artistic vision would be compromised. Our audiences prove to be our greatest supporters and we remain immensely grateful to all our Friends. Every gift, no matter what size, really does make a difference. Visit our supporters page on the website if you'd like more information about how you can help shape culture in Leeds.

I hope you like what is on offer over the next few pages and I look forward to welcoming you to this Festival. I feel confident it will be a very special few days.

With all best wishes,

Joseph Middleton – Director

In 1855 Wagner's patron, Otto Wesendonck, and his wife, Mathilde, built a sumptuous villa overlooking Zürich. Two years later they bought the house next door, Asyl, and invited Wagner and his wife Minna to move in. The Wagners were at one another's throats. Mathilde was young, beautiful and highly intelligent. What could possibly go wrong? Mathilde was a prolific writer of plays, poetry and prose. Music lovers are indebted to her for five poems that Wagner set, now known as the Wesendonck-Lieder, several of them marked Sketches for Tristan and Isolde. The comings and goings between house and villa culminated in a public scandal. This music theatre piece explores the spaces between those songs. All the music is by Wagner. It was specially created for the 2018 St Endellion Summer Festival.

Mahler Rückert Lieder

The Tenth Leeds Lieder Festival opens with a gala recital given by one of the great artists of our day. Equally famed on the great operatic stages as in concert and recital she has been named 'the superlative British Mezzo' by the San Francisco Chronicle. Joining Alice is star pianist Christian Blackshaw, her regular duo-partner at Wigmore Hall, whose deeply expressive artistry is well matched with her own. Heady Romanticism sits at the heart of this recital.

Britten Canticle I: My beloved is mine
Canticle II: Abraham and Isaac
Canticle V: The Death of Saint Narcissus
Canticle IV: The Journey of the Magi
Canticle III: Still Falls the Rain

'A masterclass in producing expressively direct and unaffected Britten' was The Guardian's verdict on the sold-out Wigmore Hall concert featuring Mark Padmore's performance of all five of the composer's Canticles. It is the first time Leeds Lieder has presented a complete performance of these extraordinary works, and Leeds Town Hall provides the perfect backdrop for these five focal points of the composer's output. Religious and secular themes are subtly blended with his distinctive sound-world to captivating effect.

The Hermes Experiment is a contemporary quartet made up of harp, clarinet, voice and double bass. Capitalising on their deliberately idiosyncratic combination of instruments, the ensemble regularly commissions new works, as well as creating their own innovative arrangements and venturing into live free improvisation. Their soprano, Heloise Werner, appeared at Leeds Lieder as a Young Artist in 2018. It is particularly good to welcome her back to Leeds with her 'boldly entertaining' (The Scotsman) ensemble, for an evening that 'mirrors our current musical landscape' (The Observer). As part of their programme, The Hermes Experiment will improvise on poems written by poets local to Leeds, creating our very own 2021 Leeds Lieder Songbook.

Anyone who attended the Leeds Lieder Fundraising Gala at Wigmore Hall a few years ago will have had their socks knocked off by the young Macedonian mezzo Ema Nikolovska. Now a BBC Radio 3 New Generation Artist, Kathleen Ferrier Award Winner, and member of the Berlin Staatsopera International Studio, Ema makes her hotly anticipated Leeds Lieder debut in a typically wide-ranging recital: a cornucopia of sounds that the audience is less likely to have been exposed to. Creating dialogues between living composers and Lieder, creating a space for poetry which is surrealistic or aleatoric (as in the songs of Cage and León), the recital is an adventure across Ema's contact with the British, Canadian, American and Germanic music communities. The audience is invited to see what happens when these different eras and styles have a chance to speak to one another in the space of an hour.

The indefatigable Graham Johnson completely revolutionised the Lied recital with his Songmakers Almanac. A typically wide-ranging programme, tonight's recital is based on the plot of Così fan tutte (and containing numerous Mozartian echoes), Johnson has devised a programme of Lieder, English songs and duets where the interactions between the Neapolitan sisters, and the manipulative Don Alfonso, progress along Da Ponte's lines: Sisters in love – 'Bella vita militar' – Constancy – Weakening – Capitulation and Abandon – Reconciliation.

This weekend we have heard music that changed the genre of the Lied, particularly Gilchrist and Tilbrook's programming of Schubert's Einsamkeit. Dr Katy Hamilton, a regular researcher and presenter for Wigmore Hall, the Southbank Centre and Salzburg Festival leads our Young Artists through the birth of the piano accompanied song.

'Katy was a huge hit all round! Wearing her erudition very lightly, she proved a constant source of positive energy, deftly steering conversations and drawing the best from fellow guests. I only hope we can still afford her next year...'

He Sings, She Sings, They Sing, You Choose.
Hannah Kendall Leeds Lieder Commission

In this modern age of gender fluidity and identity awareness, how can the notion of art song, steeped in centuries of patriarchal tradition, keep pace and maintain its relevance? What relationships can be drawn between performer and audience, particularly coming out of a Pandemic?

Carolyn Sampson, Roderick Williams and Joseph Middleton tackle the knotty issue of gender politics in song head-on with a wide-ranging programme from across Europe and spanning centuries in their search for answers, inviting the audience to contribute, join the debate and encourage them on the journey.

This recital seeks to put the audience centre stage. With your tickets, you will receive a document containing the details of many, many songs. We want YOU to choose what is performed and who sings what.

The programme may include music by the likes of Purcell, Schumann, Wolf, Brahms, Mahler, Britten, Butterworth, Debussy, Fauré, Duparc and Rachmaninov but the exact content, especially who sings what, will be decided by the audience. So, join two of Britain’s finest singers and favourites at Leeds Lieder, grab a soap box, join us for our Lieder juke box, and prepare to engage...

Leeds Lieder 2022 Young Artists

Do you love communicating words through song? Are you intrigued by the unique relationship between singer and pianist? We are inviting 10 duos, aged 30 or under, to become Leeds Lieder Young Artists and immerse themselves in the 2022 Festival. For further details and application requirements, please see our website or email info@leedslieder.org.uk
